Placer Travel Time Index Map
July 2016

This map shows the 10 miles distance from each mining recorder’s office for the purpose of recording placer claims. Placer claims must be recorded at the applicable mining recorder’s office within a specific period of time, called travel time. Travel time for placer claims is a minimum of 10 days, with an additional day for each ten miles distance (as the crow flies) from the mining recorder’s office.

This map does not show mineral tenure, areas withdrawn from staking mineral claim or class 1 notification areas.

Before going out into the field, visit the mining recorder’s office to confirm the amount of travel time assigned to the area you plan to stake in order to avoid missing the deadline to record your claim.
